Karen Roberts loves to run, but running will only get her so far. She just wants to be the best sportscaster she can be and fall in love with a man like her father. Is that too much for a girl to ask for? But when love chases her, she'll have to decide between a love that is safe or one that's risky. Karen, along with her friends, will just have to learn that in life we don't always get what we want, how we want it, and as soon as we want it. There are stops signs, winding roads, and sometimes dead ends; so how will the intersection look when all of the characters past and present worlds collide with one another in "Catch Me If You Can"?
