World survival: The Third World struggle Grainne O'Flynn

(WORLD SURVIVAL. Most of us know that three-quarters of the world's people lack the basic necessities of life - food and shelter. Our world is split in two -the rich global North and the poor global South. World Survival looks at the causes of poverty in the South: harsh climates; difficult environments; ruthless exploitation, both past and present. World Survival examines the efforts made by the North to solve the problems of the South, and looks at world trading patterns. Its approach is optimistic, although it points out the difficulties faced by standard attempts at solutions. These global problems must be tackled by the richer areas if civilisation, as we know it, is to continue. Illustrated with striking photographs, maps and charts)
