This historic book may have numerous typos and missing text. Purchasers can usually download a free scanned copy of the original book (without typos) from the publisher. Not indexed. Not illustrated. 1906 edition. Excerpt: ... behind all 'two million intelligent citizens,' newly 1885 enfranchised, impatiently awaited the opportunity of j£^7y casting their votes. Such were the perils and embarrassments amid which the 'Ministry of Caretakers' came into being. Nor was it strange that eminent politicians were willing to prophesy that after a brief and inglorious career they would be 'swept off the face of the earth.' But Lord Salisbury, reminding the House of Lords that several of the longest Administrations in English history had come into being under precarious conditions, and fortifying himself by the examples and experiences of Mr. Pitt in 1784, of Lord Liverpool in 1812, and' of Lord Palmerston in 1855, addressed himself to his heavy task with serene determination. The Fourth Party was translated bodily to a t higher sphere. Lord Randolph Churchill became Secretary of State for India -- at that time, with the exception of the Foreign Office, the most anxious and important of all Ministerial posts. Mr. Balfour, though not admitted to the Cabinet, was appointed President of the Local Government Board. Sir Henry Wolff was despatched on a special mission to Turkey and Egypt with wide and peculiar authority over the whole field of Egyptian affairs. Mr. Gorst accepted the position of Solicitor-General. Three out of the four friends who had worked together more or less harmoniously in Opposition were sworn Privy Councillors upon the same cushion; and it was also noticed that an unusual proportion of the thirtyfive members who had voted with the Fourth Party 1885 in the division upon Sir Henry Wolff's motion during St-36 the interregnum were included in the Government. Lord Randolph's popularity was enhanced by his promotion. Those commanding qualities which the...
